Morning everyone, my name is John. I've worked in the hospitality industry for 20 years here and all around the world. I've done it all washing dishes and cafes, waiting tables hotel work. I've been better at some of these roles than others, to be honest. But what I've always loved is the incredible variety of workmates I've had over the years. Today I want to introduce some of the training courses available here at the college. So today's program, this morning, there'll be short presentations about different hospitality jobs. Then this afternoon, there'll be workshops where you can explore these ideas in more detail. So your first presentation is on restaurant service. Another session focuses on kitchen assistants who helped the cooks in the kitchen. This is a great way to learn in cooking skills. There's an amazing number of traditional techniques to learn. You'd be surprised how many top chefs in expensive restaurants started out as a kitchen assistant. But be warned, kitchen assistants arrive at work first and leave last. So think hard about whether you can cope with the commandment. The session about porters cleaners and dishwashers is a popular one. These positions are good for students, especially because they require no experience. dishwashers have to work late into the evening. No surprises there. A porters role is more important than many people realize. Because guests a first impression are formed by the staff they meet on arrival. cleaners will usually be doing shift work, which may or may not suit you, depending on your situation. Another popular session looks at the role of the receptionist. This is a key role, you have to deal with every part of the hotel. So having reception work on your CV or resume is often a good way of moving your career forward in the long run. But having said that, they can be challenging, you know, dealing with people from all around the world, you have to already be good at working under a lot of pressure. You can't work out how to do it on the job. For any of these jobs, you will usually have an interview. So there's also a session on interview skills. Now frankly, for the less skilled roles, the interview will be pretty quick. But for some of the jobs I've mentioned, the interview is just as important as it is in other types of employment. Basically the key to coming across well is the same today as it was when I started 20 years ago. And the good thing is it's not too difficult to develop these skills with a little training and rehearsal.

Okay, then this afternoon we'll have the workshops they will be held in various classrooms around the college. So if you have a look at your college plan, I'll tell you where they're going to be. Now, at the moment where in the hall, you'll see it at the bottom of your plan. So if you want to go to the workshop on restaurant service, go out of the hall and turn right, walk along to the office, and it's the classroom immediately next door to that. For kitchen hands. When you come out of the hall, you'll see the square in front of you cross to the other side of this square, and you'll see a block of two classrooms. You want the one on the left. Now, porters cleaners and dishwashers, you want to find a block of classes on the northern side of the college, there's a long block of classrooms, and you want the one at the eastern end, for the receptionist workshop, turn right out of the hall and go past the office, then head up north between the two sets of classrooms. You'll come to the first in room on your left, and it's the classroom directly opposite that. For those of you who are wanting to brush up on your interview skills. There's an interview skills workshop. You see that on the western side of the square. There's a single large classroom that's in there. Okay, now let's move on to look at
